Alter ego: Army spouse skates for Roller Derby Team

By day, they're prim and proper stay-at-home moms, teachers, college students, waitresses, reporters, even scientists. But in the afternoon and on weekdays, these gentle ladies don their roller skates, pads, helmets and uniforms then hit the rink – and as many of their opponents as possible. Julie “Souxsie Skoolyard” Harrison, Army spouse and member of the Savannah Derby Devils, was looking for something physically challenging and fun when she joined the Devils four months ago.

“I wish I had done roller derby during my husband’s two (previous) deployments,” Harrison said, speaking of her 4th Infantry Brigade Combat Team husband, Staff Sgt. Scott Harrison’s previous deployments with the 3rd Infantry Division. “I did run the Army 10-Miler last year, but I was looking for something just as physical but fun.”

The mild-mannered military mom found a good workout and fun with roller derby, a sport very popular in the 1970’s that has seen resurgence in recent years. In fact, a new movie about Roller Derby, “Whip It,” directed by Drew Barrymore, was released Oct. 2. As trailers for the movie show, roller derby players don’t have to be the big, muscular, rugged types. Harrison said her husband and their 7-year-old son, Dean, are proud of her choice to become a “rollergirl” and love watching her rough it up on the rink.

“We have girls that weigh not even a (150 pounds) soaking wet, but they’re quick on their feet, and when they hit you, you just cringe,” Harrison laughed and pointed to bruises. “Once the adrenaline gets going, you don’t see faces on the other team. You just see targets.”

Harrison said the Devils consist of 28 ladies at this time. To score points, five members at a time work together to score points and prevent the other team from scoring. One designated skater, called a jammer, starts well in the back of the formation with the opponent jammer. The formation is led by another designated team member serving as a pivot. The pivot’s job is to set the pace and inform her three blockers when a jammer is trying to get through the formation. It’s the blockers’ job to block the rival team’s jammer from getting through or around the formation and assist their own jammer in getting through because she gets a point for every girl she passes. Blockers are allowed to bump or block opposing players with their own bodies, but Harrison said they’re not allowed to elbow or use their fists to stop another player.

Stewart TKD student promoted to Red Belt

Philip Konz
Child and Youth School Services

Inspiring excellence in the community’s youth is a constant goal to strive for with the Fort Stewart-Hunter Army Airfield Child and Youth School Services. It is special treat when children enrolled in any of the SKIESUnlimited programs achieve a major milestone within the program.

Josh Bones, 9, of the Fort Stewart Youth Services Taekwondo class, obtained the prestigious rank of Red Belt during a promotion ceremony held at the School Aged Services building, Sept. 29. The Red Belt is a level of proficiency comparatively few students achieve on their quest to acquire the coveted Black Belt.

Josh’s list of achievements include Best Poomse (Forms) Award for September 2009; Best Kicker Award for June 2009; Student of the Month for June 2007 and July 2009; Most Improved

Student for February 2008 and September 2008; Outstanding Student for the Month for March 2009; and Outstanding Student of the Year for 2007 and 2008. Additionally, Josh has earned numerous first, second and third place trophies and medals for the sparring and forms competitions in the six different tournaments in which he has participated.

Although Josh’s past accolades are many, he still faced a rigorous physical and mental test to earn his new belt. During the test, Josh had to perform eight different forms, numerous combinations and jumping kicks, board breaking, self defense, and various sparring techniques.

Additionally, he had to write four essays on topics such as board breaking techniques, the generation of power, leadership, and what he is doing to prepare himself for his future. Josh’s tremendous performance during the test was an inspiration to all in attendance.

TKD student of the month announced

Derek Payne
Child and Youth School Services

During the summer months, many Families throughout the Fort Stewart-Hunter Army Airfield community turned to the Child and Youth School Services SKIESUnlimited program for activities to continue the development of their children. Now fall has arrived, bringing additional activities into the lives of the community. This is a transitional period, whereby the carefree days of summer are traded for structured school attendance, homework, and tests.

However, summer was not a time of rest for the students enrolled in the SKIESUnlimited Taekwondo program. These students trained throughout the summer, participating in activities to learn the martial art of Taekwondo. Each month, the Fort Stewart Youth Services Taekwondo class holds its Student of the Month ceremony at the School Aged Services building on Fort Stewart to recognize and reward the students for their outstanding accomplishments and achievements.

For September, students receiving promotions to their next higher belt levels for their hard work and dedication were: Yellow Stripe Belt - Charlie Conger, 9; Yellow Belt - Lucas C. Skinner, 8; Orange Belt - Hannah V. R. Payne, 8, and Christian T. Touchet, 10; Green Belt - Joshua I. R. Davis, 12, and Javier Gonzalez-Rodriguez, 10; Purple Belt - Jared Hazel, 10; and Red Belt - Joshua T. Bones, 9.

Earning the coveted Student of the Month Award for September was Javier Gonzalez-Rodriguez, 10, for demonstrating hard work, discipline, determination, and enthusiasm.

Outstanding Student Awards were presented to Terri Brown, 10, Lucas Skinner, Brea Guidry, 11, and Scott Wilson, 13, for their commitment, effort, and contributions to the class.

Receiving this month’s Best Poomsea (Forms) Award was Josh Bones for performing all of his forms in an exemplary manner.

September proved to be another fabulous month for the students and Families of the Fort Stewart Youth Services Taekwondo class. Transitioning from summer to school is an exciting yet stressful period for children. Employing the lessons learned such as the "Top 10 Rules" and the martial arts "Aims to Achieve" help make experiencing a new grade, new friends, and even new subjects a positive experience for students of the Taekwondo class.

The skills, knowledge and accomplishments the children learn and achieve while involved in any of the Child and Youth School Services SKIESUnlimited programs will help them with the most important transition of all - from childhood to adulthood. It is imperative that we give our children the necessary tools for this transition. The Fort Stewart-Hunter Army Airfield Child and Youth School Services SKIESUnlimited program is here to help your Family. Get your Family involved today.
